

A patient story

Daniel Kristeen

Last month I needed a hip replacement. After surgery, the doctor explained I had lost a lot of blood. I was told I needed a blood transfusion and would need to be kept in for a few days. I've now since learnt that this might have been avoided if I had been prescribed a medicine to reduce blood loss before I had had surgery.

I hope that others don't have a similar experience to me and that staff consider prescribing this medicine for other patients like me in the future.